Two curious and courageous children seek the source of a sound in the night. They meet fanciful creatures – a herd of hippos, monsters, a flying cow, and more – as captivated readers join in their journey of imagination. Grandpa can't help find the answer, as it is his roar of a snore creating the sound.

Grandpa, What's That Sound in the Middle of the Night? appeals to young readers, grandparents, parents, and those of us who hear that same sound in the night. Snore!

It starts with a whispering, whistling breeze, like a spy plane skimming the tops of the trees . . .

Review by Midwest Book Review:

Things that go bump in the night are the primal fear of many a childhood. "Grandpa, What's That Sound in the Middle of the Night?" is a story about two young kids facing their fears on their grandfather's old farm. They hunt to see what the nighttime disturbance could be, in this fun picture book with a fantastic art style, ideal for young readers. "Grandpa, What's That Sound in the Middle of the Night?" is an excellent choice for community library picturebook collections.
